Posted on: June 17, 2010

Fox Rehabilitation in Cherry Hill, NJ, has become the first private physical therapy practice to earn accreditation from the American Physical Therapy Association (APTA) for a post-graduate residency training program in geriatrics.

Participants will provide patient care, receive one-on-one clinical mentoring with Fox professionals and spend time on active learning experiences with faculty from Thomas Jefferson University and Temple University in Philadelphia.

Fox has also partnered with Allied Orthotics & Prosthetics, Wound Healing Solutions and Mid-Atlantic Medical for learning opportunities in orthotics, prosthetics, wound care and advanced seating and positioning,

"I want geriatric physical therapy practice to gain the momentum and recognition that orthopedic and sports physical therapy practice has done in the past," said Dr. Tim Fox, CEO of Fox Rehabilitation.

The program lasts 12 to 15 months, depending on each clinician's prior experience. Applications for the residency will be accepted year round.
